

FIREWALL PROTECTION IN COMPUTER NETWORK SYSTEMS

ABSTRACT

[0054] A firewall for data or computer communications and networks using a physically separate security machine to safeguard and secure the main computer. The physical electrical separation contains only the necessary hardware to receive software from a personal or main computer and the software is erased automatically by the security machine after use. The security machine cannot be hardwired to both the owner's main computer and network at the same time and be functional.